

Sunny 78/59 • Tomorrow: Sunny 80/61 B18

Democracy Dies in Darkness

SATURDAY, AUGUST 30, 2025 · $4

On appeal, U.S. tariffs again ruled to be illegal

Court agrees Trump overstepped his powers; fees stay as case goes on

> BY RACHEL LERMAN AND DAVID J. LYNCH

President Donald Trump's cornerstone economic policy was dealt another setback Friday when a federal appeals court ruled he did not have the authority to impose most of his sweeping tariffs on imports from dozens of trading partners.

Trump's tariffs will be allowed to remain in effect for now, to allow time for an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court. U.S. Attorney General Pam Bondi tweeted Friday night that the Justice Department would appeal the decision.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit ruled 7-4 to uphold a lower court's decision that Trump overstepped his authority in using a 1977 law, the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (IEEPA), to impose most of his tariffs. Historically, the emergency law has been used to impose economic sanctions in the case of threats against the country.

"The statute bestows significant authority on the President to undertake a number of actions in response to a declared national emergency, but none of these actions explicitly include the power to impose tariffs, duties, or the like, or the power to tax," a group of federal judges wrote in

Displaced Palestinians flee Gaza City on Thursday toward the south as Israel maneuvers to seize the enclave's largest urban center.

A heavy choice in Gaza City: Flee or stay?

BY GERRY SHIH, SIHAM SHAMALAKH AND MOHAMAD EL CHAMAA

TEL AVIV — For days, Ali Ahmed had been getting text messages from the Israeli army urging him to evacuate from Gaza City. The sound of Israeli artillery and demolition robots clearing buildings had grown louder, he recalled, and the explosions were now less than 100 yards from his tent. Still, As Israel works to relocate nearly 1 million, residents wrestle with the costs and perils the former cabbie was struggling with the hard calculus of whether to stay or go.

Hiring a donkey cart to move his family's mattresses and cooking pots to the southern edge of Gaza City would cost 800 shekels, or about $240, Ahmed said. The onward trip to the safe zone designated by the Israeli military farther south would cost much more. Setting up a wood-and-tarp tent would come out to 2,500 shekels, he figured.

In recent days, the Israeli military has launched an effort to drive nearly 1 million residents from Gaza City to a sprawling tent encampment in the southern Gaza Strip before sending in ground troops to seize the enclave's largest urban center. Although some Israeli officials have expressed confidence that Gaza City could be effectively evacuated, others have warned that some of the population, like Ahmed in the Saftawi neighborhood, may refuse to relinquish their

SEE EVACUATION ON A10

SEE TARIFFS ON AS was already

BY ANDREA SACHS

AND FEDERICA COCCO

down. Enter the Guard.

Canden Arciniega was not giving up on summer. The chief operating officer of Tours by Foot had seen the company suffer setbacks in multiple cities, including D.C. The weather swung between sweltering hot and soaking wet. A decline in international tourism reduced the usual number of visitors. A tepid economy limited spending.

But Arciniega was hopeful for one last hurrah in the final weeks of school vacation. Then, on Aug. 11, President Donald Trump deployed the National Guard in the capital city. Hundreds of troops rolled in and fanned out in tourist areas such as the National Mall and Union Station.

"It has been a marked downturn since the National Guard showed up," said Arciniega, who has been canceling one or two of the eight to 10 walking tours scheduled each day because of a lack of bookings. "So timing-wise, it could be one of the major factors. By several key indicators marketing forecasts, street-level foot traffic, hotel occupancy -Washington's tourism economy is sliding. Analysts cite the city's battered image and mounting fears about security as key drivers. The sight of National Guard troops, now authorized to carry weapons, could further chill demand at a time when the industry can least afford it.

SEE TOURISM ON A18

D.C. tourism | Hacker unearthed key data in Tesla collision trial

BY TRISHA THADANI AND FAIZ SIDDIQUI

Years after a Tesla driver using Autopilot plowed into a young Florida couple in 2019, crucial electronic data detailing how the fatal wreck unfolded was missing. The information was key for a wrongful death case the survivor and the victim's family were building against Tesla, but the company said it didn't have the data.

Then a self-described hacker, enlisted by the plaintiffs to decode the contents of a chip they recovered from the vehicle, found it while sipping a Venti-size hot chocolate at a South Florida Starbucks. Tesla later said in court that it had the data on its own servers all along.

The hacker's discovery would become a key piece of evidence presented during a trial that began last month in Miami federal court, which dissected the final moments before the collision and ended in a historic $243 million verdict against the company.

The pivotal and previously unreported role of a hacker in access $ing\,that\,information\,points\,to\,how$ valuable Tesla's data is when its futuristic technology is involved in a crash. While Tesla said it has produced similar data in other litigation, the Florida lawsuit reflects how a jury's perception of Tesla's cooperation in recovering such data can play into a judgment in the hundreds of millions of

The company's driver-assistance technology includes features that automatically control a Tesla's speed and steering, and are programmed to react when an obstacle, such as another vehicle or a pedestrian, is in its path. Tesla CEO Elon Musk has referred to its

SEE TESLA ON A14

Trump tries new tack to ax funds

MOVE TARGETS $5B FOR GLOBAL AID

President tests loophole to bypass Congress

> BY JACOB BOGAGE AND EMILY DAVIES

President Donald Trump said he will cancel nearly $5 billion in congressionally approved funding for U.S. international assistance and diplomacy, setting up a fresh confrontation in the White House's attempt to wrest constitutional spending power away from lawmakers.

The Republican chair of the Senate Appropriations Committee on Friday called the move an "attempt to undermine the law."

The move risks complicating talks to avert a looming government shutdown deadline. Federal funding expires Sept. 30, and without new spending laws, broad swaths of the government would shutter. Republicans control both chambers of Congress but need support from Democrats in the Senate to pass spending laws.

Trump and White House budget director Russell Vought took office with plans to challenge Congress's power of the purse through impoundments, or unilateral moves to cancel legally mandated spending. Impoundments are illegal under a 1974 law that Vought has pledged to challenge in court.

But the White House says it can block funds in a different manner using a loophole in the statute: When the president asks Congress to rescind certain funding, those resources are frozen for 45 days. By sending such a request to Congress within 45 days of the end of the fiscal year, Trump can essentially run out the clock on that funding and cancel it even if lawmakers don't act, through what's known as a "pocket rescission."

"Last night, President Trump SEE AID ON AS

In Iowa: A GOP lawmaker races Democrats to define budget bill. A4

Floodwaters from Hurricane Katrina pour through a levee in New Orleans on Aug. 30, 2005.

horrors still linger 20 years later Visuals of an American catastrophe

Hurricane Katrina's

remain seared in collective memory

BY BRADY DENNIS

Two decades ago, before Hurricane Katrina inflicted unprecedented devastation along the Gulf Coast, before it killed at least 1,392 people and displaced hundreds of thousands, before levees failed and floodwaters swallowed New Orleans, before the glaring lapses in the government response led to years of questions about how to better prepare for such disasters ... before all that, there was the anticipation of a Category 5 hurricane carving a path toward the Louisiana coast.

"This could be the storm that everyone feared," a front-page story in The Washington Post proclaimed on Aug. 29, 2005.

And it was.

Twenty years after one of the country's most costly, deadly and transformative disasters, memories may fade and younger generations have no firsthand recollection of how Katrina unfolded. It becomes easier to forget what made the storm so catastrophic, SEE KATRINA ON A6

Rebirth: The Superdome sparked a comeback. B1

IN THE NEWS

Harris security is revoked President Donald Trump yanked his 2024 rival's Secret Service protection ahead of a planned book tour. A3

Battle over bathrooms Two school districts in Virginia filed suit against the Education Department to defend a policy supporting transgender students. B13

THE NATION Fox News correspondent Jacqui Heinrich is making waves with her tough reporting. A3 The attack in Minneapolis may spark an increase in security funds for Catholics. A5

THE WORLD

India's leader will visit China as Trump's trade war draws the rivals into a détente. A9

The State Department denied visas to Palestinian officials for the U.N. General Assembly. A11

THE ECONOMY E.J. Antoni made a key connection while getting his doctorate. Now he's tapped to lead the top statistics agency. A12 New FDA rules that narrow the group of people advised to get coronavirus vaccines brought U.S. policy closer to other countries. A13

STYLE

The president signed an executive order expanding his campaign against modernism in federal buildings. B1

VINCENT LAFORET/AF

SPORTS For Maryland football

and Coach Michael Locksley, a new season dawns — and brings new pressure with it. B7

THE REGION The Air Force has offered military funeral honors for veteran Ashli

Babbitt, the Jan. 6 rioter killed by police. B13 Federal prosecutors filed a misdemeanor charge against the D.C. man who threw a sandwich at a federal officer, B13

BUSINESS NEWS	A12
COMICS	B4
OBITUARIES	B16
OPINION PAGES	A15
TELEVISION	B6
WORLD NEWS	A9

CONTENT © 2025 The Washington Post Year 148, No. 54324

